

I'm not robot!

What are the current trends in fashion industry. 2019 fashion resale market and trend report.

The runways have spoken, and the '90s are back. So are the '80s. And the '70s. There are also a couple fashion trends that can't be traced back to any particular decade, but are covetable nonetheless. Confusing, I know, but designers like Chanel, Gucci, and more declared everything from power shoulders to micro-micro bags a thing, and we're convinced we need it all. We also tapped Nordstrom's creative director Ruth Basloe to help weigh in on her favorite styles, with shopping tips on how to get the look now. See which designers made the cut in ELLE.com's Fall 2019 trend guide, here. Itty Bitty Bags "A small, structured style in a new shape is the statement bag of the season," said Basloe. "We recommend combining two handbag trends by choosing snake print or croc-embossed leather, which are also big." If you wanna go even smaller, the next "big" bag trend is teeny. Meet The Bitty Bag. TBB is an impractical accessory that holds approximately one Airpod, but the absurdity is part of the charm. Jacquemus created a meme sensation, but designers like Salvatore Ferragamo, Chloé and more can provide a little inspiration. Jacquemus, Chloé, GivenchySalvatore Ferragamo, Alexander McQueen, Brandon MaxwellGetty ImagesMake Way for Millennial Purple2018 was all about Millennial Pink, but everything is coming up purple this fall. As seen at Rodarte and Tom Ford, the orchid hue is all the rage. You can opt for an all-over color ("We loved the head-to-toe, monochromatic looks at Balenciaga and Jacquemus," Basloe said), or you can easily work in a touch of lavender with your accessories. Clockwise: Tom Ford, Rodarte, CushnieLeft to right: Dries Van Noten, Christian Siriano, Michael KorsGetty ImagesEvery Good Superhero Needs a CapeOne of the strongest outerwear silhouettes to come out of the Fall 2019 collections was the cape. Chanel gave the capelet the tweed treatment, Marc Jacobs showed one in Leopard, and Hedi Slimane's second collection for Celine made the best in basic. The many variations prove the heroic cut works for every occasion.Clockwise: Chanel, Marc Jacobs, and ChloéLeft to right: Celine by Hedi Slimane, Burberry, Oscar de la RentaGetty ImagesPut a Feather...Everywhere and AnywhereInstead of feathers and fur weighing you down, designers are giving the texture a lighter touch. Valentino delicately edged their dresses in a wispy trim, and Proenza Schouler showed a feather-backed top that looked as if it would blow away with a soft breeze. We're especially fond of Prada's collection of feathered goods, including a pair of boyfriend jeans trimmed in ostrich that will amp up a basic white tee. Clockwise: Loewe, Giambattista Valli, ValentinoLeft to right: Prabal Gurung, Proenza Schouler, Sies MarjanGetty ImagesCinched SuitingDesigners seemed to mind meld around suit styling: it's all about the belt. Blazers came with built-in cinchers at Prada, and Marni contrasted gray suits with heavy chains. Follow their lead and nip the waist on all your suits, oversized and otherwise. The best part about this trend is that you don't need to invest in the jacket—simply buy a cute new belt and style it accordingly. Clockwise: Tibi, Marni, PradaGetty ImagesBrock Collection, Hermes, and SacaiGetty ImagesSlip Into SatinBreak out your steamer, because satin is back in a big way. Versace brought back their '90s satin dresses, updating them in neon hues with contrasting lace edges. Christopher Kane, Off-White and Brandon Maxwell also got on the satin trend with bright evening wear that is more than your average slip. The silky look makes sense for formal events, but make it work for an average day at the office with a button-down shirt.Clockwise: Brandon Maxwell, Off-White, Philosophy Di Lorenzo SerafiniChristopher Kane, Versace, Giorgio ArmaniGetty ImagesSlashed, Asymmetrical NecklinesIf you're on the fence about off-the-shoulder silhouettes, this asymmetric neckline is a nice compromise. Carolina Herrera's slouchy, lopsided shoulder is effortlessly put-together; an "I just threw it on" vibe. Clockwise: Carolina Herrera, Rejina Pyo, ZimmermannLeft to right: Cushnie, Kate Spade New York, Self-PortraitGetty ImagesRen-FaireGet your giant turkey legs out, because the Renaissance has come to the runway. Vaquera presented square necklines so good you'll climb down a balcony like your name is Juliet Capulet. It's not too literal, though. Y/Project reinterpreted period dressing using a similar cut, but updated it with a body-skimming silhouette covered in a modern print.Clockwise: Vaquera, Emilia Wickstead, RochasGetty ImagesLeft to right: Simone Rocha, Y/Project, Preen by Thornton BregazziGetty ImagesCoats With Super-long HemsAfter looking at all the fall 2019 collections my coats started to feel so...short. Tory Burch, Max Mara and others presented longline coats that will provide extra warmth this winter. These longline coats aren't your typical lightweight dusters either. Instead, find them super structured and made of heavy wool. Basloe agrees, noting that fall is all about the statement coat. "A coat with some kind of drama is a must-have for fall," she said, suggesting a bright yellow puffer that skims your ankles. Clockwise: Chanel, Tory Burch, Jil SanderLeft to Right: Max Mara, Alberta Ferretti, AgnonaGetty ImagesStatement HatsDesigners must be bored of beanies, because they presented all kinds of wacky toppers for fall. The standout style belongs to Maria Grazia Chiuri's bucket hats at Christian Dior, sure to be a street style staple. Get ahead of the trend now with our current obsession, Burberry's heritage plaid bucket hat.Clockwise: Christian Dior, Nina Ricci, House of HollandLeft to right: Loewe, Gucci, Tom FordGetty ImagesQuilty PleasuresQuilted patchwork was all over the runways, seen below at Louis Vuitton and Oscar de la Renta. It's a '70s trend that could have gone very wrong in the redux, but luckily, these looks are thoroughly modern. Take Tory Burch's must-have boots, which look thrifted in the best way possible.Clockwise: Jonathan Cohen, Louis Vuitton, EeroGetty ImagesLeft to right: Oscar de la Renta, Eckhaus Latta, Ulla JohnsonGetty ImagesThe Patagonia EffectLast year belonged to the puffer, but 2019 is all about a different kind of performance fabric: fleece. We saw the trend start with Sandy Liang's Insta-favorite jacket, but designers like Fendi are ramping up the luxury, reworking the outdoorsy staple in leather. Of course, Patagonia remains the (very affordable) OG, but don't sleep on the latest reincarnations of this campy style. Clockwise: Fendi, Coach 1941, Sandy LiangEckhaus Latta, 3.1 Phillip Lim, Ashley WilliamsGetty ImagesPrep SchoolWe spotted a ton of uniform inspiration on the fall runways: polo shirts, sweater vests, and three-piece sets. Thom Browne made an empire reworking schoolboy suits, and Victoria Beckham and Lacoste are taking notes. Specifically, designers are mad for plaid.

"Checks and plaids will be everywhere this season," Basloe noted, "There were so many exciting ways designers reinvented these classic patterns for fall, from brightly colored tartan at Marine Serre to Chanel's graphic black and white houndstooth, and more."Clockwise: Thom Browne, Salvatore Ferragamo, Victoria BeckhamChristian Dior, Longchamp, LacosteGetty ImagesGold StandardI wear gold jewelry daily, but the runways served up full looks dipped in 24k. Brock Collection's gilded gown will stand out at a black tie event, but take direction from Altuzarra for an everyday look, who justifies a casual shine with metallic knits.Clockwise: Moschino, Altuzarra, Brock CollectionGetty ImagesLeft to right: Celine by Hedi Slimane, Acne, MissoniGetty ImagesPower ShoulderThe '80s is a difficult decade to pull off (I'm convinced acid wash will never make a full comeback), but power shoulders are back. All the major fashion players like Saint Laurent and Balenciaga are advocating for the a wide-shouldered, slim-waist silhouette. They make me want to ask for some kind of Business Woman Special.Left to right: Isabel Marant, Balmain, BalenciagaGetty ImagesClockwise: Proenza Schouler, Stella McCartney, Saint Laurent Justine Carreon is the market editor at ELLE.com covering fashion, Dutch ovens, and fashion again. When she isn't approaching style through a modern, accessible lens, she's scouring eBay for vintage Levi's and pretending she knows how to surf. Before joining ELLE.com in 2015 she worked as a freelance writer and stylist in New York City. You've seen them in the runway, but can you see yourself wearing them? Sure, those supermodels with perfect proportions and gazelle-like silhouettes may look fantastic in everything, but how can a ordinary human being actually wear 2019's latest fashion trends off of the catwalk? Well, this one's for you—from one regular human to another. All the Ruffles Guess what Meghan Markle's wore for her pre-Christmas lunch hosted by the Queen? A ruffle neck dress by Erdem. That's right, ruffles are back and they are bigger and better! You can get as creative as you wish with ruffles, just make sure that you give them the attention they deserve by pairing them with more muted details. Or heck, go all out and pair it with bold prints! To be honest, the best part of dressing up is playing around with your clothes. If you need inspiration, check out Marc Jacobs' gigantic ruffled dress in all shades of sorbet. Whether you go minimal or absolutely barbaric, adding ruffles will surely liven your outfit and your day. This Willow and Clay dress is proof enough! And hey, if it's good enough for the Duchess of Sussex, it's good enough for us. Biker Shorts I'm sure you've seen it all over Instagram by now, and you either raised your brow or squealed in delight. The Hadids loved them and the Kardashians wear them perfectly. These biker shorts took a lot of media attention as they made their way to the most coveted catwalks and into every influencer's closet. Source: @missguided Biker shorts are the perfect balance of comfort and style. Pair them with a tux to create a professional street style look or don them with a sweater on a lazy Saturday. Or if it's really not your style, toss them in the back corner of your closet and wait until the trend dies down! Whichever camp you're in, these biker shorts are definitely going to change the fashion game. Wild Prints Animal prints are coming back, and it's going to be crazier than ever! Not only are we seeing it in the comparatively subdued hues of tan and black, but this 2019, we'll be seeing these prints in vibrant hues. If you're absolutely gaga over prints, check out Tom Ford's collection. I can't believe those colors and prints can even sit together in a palette, but leave it to Tom Ford to design that perfectly. We're talking about purples and oranges with leopard spots here. Meanwhile, Christian Cowan revealed a marvelous sequin and zebra print ensemble that just made my heart skip a beat. Not sure where to begin? Wearing the O.G. colors isn't a fashion faux pas yet, and it's a great way to get comfortable with the trend. This Beyond Proper dress is a beautiful jump off point. Fringes Channeling the 80's vibe like it'll never get tired, the fringe is all over the runway again from Giorgio Armani to Balmain. We're seeing them in dazzling silver in sparkly holiday skirts and long beady dresses that are perfect for dancing. Source: @willowandclay To incorporate it into your daily look, layer on a neutral-colored cardigan with fringe layers over a simple tee and jeans 'fit. Add some tan shoes to complete the boho chic look. This is a perfect casual out-and-about wear for days when you just want to feel comfortable.
